CMIO of PIH Health recognized for outstanding achievement in applied medical informatics

CHICAGO, June 19, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- Dr. Davis Lee, CMIO for PIH Health has been named one of four recipients of the 2013 AMDIS Award, a prestigious recognition saluting excellence and outstanding achievement in applied medical informatics.

"On behalf of Allscripts, I'd like to congratulate Dr. Lee for his recognition in leadership, innovation and continuous efforts to improve patient care and population health," said Paul M. Black, President and Chief Executive Officer of Allscripts. "We are committed to our partnership with PIH Health and are pleased to provide the organization with the solutions they need to transform healthcare."

The awards program is presented by the Association of Medical Directors of Information Systems, a non-profit organization representing some 2,300 physician-HIT leaders. Lee's award is for his work at PIH Health, an integrated delivery network based in Whittier, Calif.

In 2006, PIH Health began implementing the Allscripts suite of products, which now serves its inpatient, ambulatory and home healthcare units. During his time as medical director of informatics beginning in 2008 and CMIO in 2010, Lee led various physician committees, provided one-on-one physician training and on-going support in order for his physicians to get acclimated with the system. The Allscripts suite of products helped PIH Health achieve the requirements for Leapfrog and ARRA Stage 1 and PIH Health is now well-positioned to provide a continuum of care across all settings, thus achieving a patient centered community record.
