Holmusk will leverage this investment to continue its rapid expansion of its flagship offering, the NeuroBlu Database—a leading source of real-world clinical data for the behavioral health industry.

Now that the financing has been completed, Veradigm and Holmusk intend to enter into a data partnership to bring cohorts of behavioral health and related de-identified patient data from Veradigm to the NeuroBlu Database, significantly adding to Holmusk's real-world clinical data asset.

"Mental and behavioral health is a serious global health problem that has only increased during and post the COVID-19 pandemic," said Rick Poulton, Veradigm Chief Executive Officer. "Holmusk has proven expertise to create the evidence needed to improve mental health. We are proud to equip the company with the resources needed to advance this important work."

"This investment will enable our team to continue its work in curating and enhancing data as we plan to build the world's largest platform for behavioral health data," said Nawal Roy, Holmusk Founder and CEO. "We remain laser-focused on this mission because we know that quality data leads to improved evidence, which leads to better health outcomes."

"We feel fortunate to form a partnership with Veradigm, a company that shares our vision for the transformative power that data can have in health care," said Michael Weintraub, Chair of the Holmusk Board. "Working collaboratively will help us to deepen our investment in the behavioral health space and make a broader impact."
